

Jaguar Photo Reveals Conservation Success Story

Discuss Related

0

By

OurAmazingPlanet Staff

OurAmazingPlanet

updated 12/21/2011 2:48:33 PM ET

A photo released by a conservation group today (Dec. 21) shows a female jaguar and her two cubs in Bolivia's best-conserved i

The jaguars were photographed near the Isono Station of the Santa Cruz-Puerto Suarez Gas Pipeline in Kaa Iya National Park in jaguar, nicknamed Kaaiyana, has been seen with her cubs in the area for over a month and has lived near the park for at least s conservationists with the Wildlife Conservation Society, which releases camera-trap photos on an ongoing basis.

"Kaaiyana's tolerance of observers is a testimony to the absence of hunters in this area, and her success as a mother means th her and her cubs to eat," said John Polisar, coordinator of the Wildlife Conservation Society's jaguar conservation program.

At more than 13,200 square miles (34,400 square kilometers), Kaa Iya National Park is the largest protected area in Bolivia. The biggest and best-conserved dry forest in the world. The creation of Kaa Iya in 1995 marked the first time in South America that a established through the initiative of an indigenous people, the Guaraní-Isoceño.

The Wildlife Conservation Society has conducted extensive research in the area and estimates that at least 1,000 jaguars live in Jaguar Conservation Unit, a 47,000-square-mile (124,000-square-km) area spanning southern Bolivia and northern Paraguay.

The Kaa Iya Foundation, supported by the Wildlife Conservation society and private energy companies, surveyed the jaguars in first seen at the Isono site in 2005 with male jaguars, and again in 2006 with a cub. The Kaa Iya park guards work to prevent illeg settlements along the right-of-way to the gas pipeline and ensure the protection of wildlife, including jaguar prey, in the park.

"The photographic histories of jaguars in the area by WCS and the reproductive success of this female are testimony that conse been effective," said Julie Kunen, director of the Wildlife Conservation Society's Latin America and Caribbean Programs.

- Camera Trapped: Photos of Wonderful Wildlife
- Iconic Cats: All 9 Subspecies of Tiger
- Top 10 Nature Film Gadgets

Follow OurAmazingPlanet for the latest in Earth science and exploration news on Twitter and on © 2012 OurAmazingPlanet. All rights reserved.